No. 15.] "TAKE CHOICE OF ALL MY LIBRARY."—Shakespeare. MARCH, 1854.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

THE authorship of the words and music of the National Anthem, has long been the subject of dispute among literary men and antiquaries; but the question (as far as the music is concerned) is now set at rest, by the discovery of the original composition.

We were surprised, the other day, by seeing an article in print in which the writer—in a state of barbarous ignorance—claims the tune for Lulli, the celebrated musician of France! Another writer has laid the foundation for a report, which is frequently copied in auctioneers' and booksellers' Catalogues, that the air is of Scottish origin, and to be found in the Aberdeen cantus of 1682! The air here alluded to, is that beginning, "Remember O thou man," which is about as much like God save the Queen, as it is Yankee Doodle!

A claim has also been set up for the unfortunate Harry Carey, but it will not bear the slightest examination. D'Israeli brought forward a heap of nonsense, to shew that the Anthem was composed for the Catholic Chapel of James the Second! Another writer (Dr. Campbell) stated that it was composed for this king's coronation! Again, it is said to have been composed by Purcell, to celebrate the arrival of King William! Handel is also said to have written it for King George! Dr. Cooke (an old organist of Westminster Abbey) went a little farther back: he declared it was composed by Dr. Rogers in the reign of Henry VIII!!

The fact is, the melody of our National Anthem was composed by Dr. John Bull, and first performed on Thursday, July 16, 1607, at Merchant Taylors' Hall, before his Majesty King James the First. According to Stow's Chronicle, continued by E. Howes to 1631, the music on this occasion, "consisted of twelve lutes, equally divided, six and six in a window on either side the hall, and in the ayre betweene them were a gallant shippe triumphant, wherein were three rare menne like saylors, being eminent for voice and skill, who in their several songs were assisted and seconded by the cunning lutanist. There was also in the hall, the musique of the city; and in the upper chamber, the children of his Majesty's Chappell sang a grace at the King's table, and also whilest the King sat at dinner, JOHN BULL, Doctor of Musique, one of the organists of his Majestie's Chappell Royall, and free of the Merchant Tailors, being in a citizen's gown, cappe, and hood, plaied most excellent melody upon a small pair of organs, placed there for that purpose only."

The original MS., in Dr. Bull's autograph, of the music performed on this occasion, is now in the possession of Mr. Richard Clark, Lay Vicar of Westminster Abbey. It will shortly be published, when the public will have an opportunity of judging of the merits of the "mighty Bull."

Mr. Clark in his prospectus says, "The National Air of 'God save the King,' is composed in four parts. It is written in 3-time, and the melody is, with one or two exceptions, precisely the same as is now in use, and it is but justice to the memory of Dr. Bull, its composer, to state that his reputation may be considered to have suffered from the claims which have unjustly been made for various persons as the composer, and from the slight alteration which has arisen from the lapse of time, and the want of an authentic copy as a reference. It is necessary to observe, that the movement extracted from this MS., and published by Dr. Kitchener, in what he calls his Loyal and National Songs of England, as 'God save the King,' is not the melody referred to, and that the Doctor's extract is merely certain variations on a few notes, probably used as the introductory music to the King and vast company invited to Merchant Tailors' Hall, 1607, and only as a flourish for the cornets or trumpets in the State and City Bands."

THE INTRODUCTION OF THE BEAVER INTO ENGLAND.

THE following Letter from William Burnet, Governor of New England, to Mrs. Clayton (afterwards Lady Sundon) is curious, as announcing the first introduction of the Beaver into this country.

BOSTON, July 7th, 1729.

"MADAM,

I presume to present you with a young beaver alive, which I have not heard has yet been seen in England. And as this is a famous animal for its industry and policy, and, I think, peculiar to America, I hope it will not be unworthy of your acceptance, if it has the good fortune to come over alive. Mr. Bacon, brother to Sir Edmund Bacon of Norfolk, has taken charge of it; and as he is very obliging, I know he will be as careful of it as possible. It will require to be kept within stone walls, or iron bars, or to be chained, because it will eat through anything of wood, when its teeth are longer. The creature is tame enough, and will not bite unless provoked; but it is best not to trust it. It will eat any sort of victuals, but chooses fish, or greens, or the bark of poplar trees; but bread and grass, and leaves will do.

I need not acquaint you with the art of this creature, but I may say, that I myself have seeu trees, that I was told was cut down by them, which have fallen exactly across a brook, where they wanted to have them lie; and about these trees, twigs of brush so twisted together, to make a hedge, that I could not undo them anywhere without cutting. All this work was to hold a dam of clay, which they had made to raise the water; and when we broke down some of it, we found it repaired next morning, for they always work in the night, and only then. This reminds me to mention, that it should have a flat tub of water to dabble in, which is natural to it.

I have also sent along with it a fur of a white beaver, which is very rare, and comes from the northern parts of this continent only, and was presented to me lately by the chief of an Indian nation. If the young beaver should die, as I am afraid it will, being a very tender animal, this fur will serve to give you some idea of it when full grown.

If what I take the liberty to send you now as a curiosity, should in your opinion, deserve her Majesty's casting an eye upon it, I shall think myself very happy in finding anything that cau give occasion to the least part of that variety of conversation with which you have the honour to entertain so great a Queen.

And I hope, Madam, that if I am unsuccessful, you will have the gooduess to excuse my mistaken endeavours, that were sincerely intended to express the scntiments of gratitude and respect, with which I have the honour to be,

MADAM,
Your most obliged, most obedient
and humble Servant,
W. BURNET."

Neglected Biography.

No. XV.—ANDREW BECKET.

THE subject of this notice was the only son of Thomas Becket, the well-known bookseller of Pall Mall. He was boru on the 11th of September, 1749, and at an early period of his youth was placed under the care of Dr. Rose, theu master of an eminent school at Chiswick. He afterwards completed his education under the Rev. Dr. Pollock, at the academy in Great Windmill-street. When only in his fourteenth year, young Becket wrote a comedy, founded on the Emile of Rousseau, of which his father's partner, De Hondt, thought so favourably as to have it translated and published in Dutch. From this period Andrew Becket became an assiduous cultivator of the muse, although in secret, for his father destined him for the selling, not the making, of books.

At the elder Becket's house, Garrick was a frequent visitor, and through his instrumentality, the subject of our notice received the appointment of sub-librariau at Carlton Palace, where he continued for many years to discharge the duties of his trust with great credit to himself, and much satisfaction to the Prince of Wales.

His pen, during this time, was not idle, and many are the critiques, jeux d'esprit, epigrams, &c., that appeared in the public prints, gaining for their author the reputation of ready and caustic wit. The poem of Theodosius and Constantia was the first sustained effort of his muse, which gave Mr. Becket place and consideration among the poets of his time.

For nearly ten years, Andrew Becket was one of the principal writers in the British and Monthly Reviews, aud as a critic, was well known for candour, taste and discrimination. This employment, however, does not appear to have been very lucrative to the writer. His own account of this matter is too interesting to be omitted:—

"For two huudred and eighty articles in the Monthly Review, (the number of volumes read for that purpose five hundred and ninety) and being the labour of between four and five years, I, A. Becket, am rewarded by R. Griffiths with the sum of forty-five pounds, no agreement being made. N.B. This is at the rate of about three shillings per article. Thus, for wading through Camden's Britaunia, 5 vols. folio—for composing six pages for the Review, and extracting seven more; the whole being the labour of between two and three months—I receive three shillings. For reading the 'Life of Frederick, King of Prussia,' 2 vols. 8vo. of fourteen hundred pages, and for writing eleven pages, three shillings. For drawing up an account of the 'Temporal Government of the Pope's State,' twelve pages, three shillings, and so on; three shillings per article for criticisms to the number of seventy, and making from two to six pages each in the Review.

"If Mr. Griffith should observe on this, that he has allowed me the same for the smaller articles as for the larger ones, I beg leave to reply, that three shilliugs per article in the 'Monthly Review' is very wretched pay, eveu for those which may be called small, since I had two, three, and sometimes four and five volumes to peruse of every separate work; the entire number of volumes being four hundred and sixty; with one hundred and thirty to read for the larger articles; in all five hundred and ninety volumes. But if this be really hard upon a man whose income is very small, what shall be said with regard to the seventy other and larger articles? I have not words to express my fcelings on the matter.

"A. BECKET.

"N.B. The clear profit arising to R. G. from the sale of the 'Monthly Review,' was two thousand pounds per annum."

The work by which Mr. Becket is best known, is that entitled Shakespeare Himself Again, 2 vols. 8vo. 1815, in which he is said to have elucidated many obscure and disputed passages, and to have done more for the restoration of the original text, than any of his more learned predecessors. "If the dead," says Southey, "could be supposed to take any interest in the integrity of their literary reputation, with what complacence might we not imagine our great poet to contemplate the labours of Mr. Becket." Without putting the author of Shakespeare Himself Again in competition with Steevens, Malone, and Isaac Reed, (commentators who preceded him) his work will perhaps not lose by comparison with the labours of some who have followed him.

Two volumes of Dramatic and Prose Miscellanies by Andrew Becket, were edited in 1838, by Dr. William Beattie.

Andrew Becket died January 19th, 1843, at the advanced age of 95. There is a monument to his memory in Keunington Church.

Memorials of Old London.

FROM an account of Vauxhall gardens published by Dodsley in 1761, it appears that they were then lighted by about 1500 lamps, which number has since been increased to 25,000. They wero also adorned by various paiutings by Hogarth and Hayman, some of which have only recently been removed. Mr. Tyers died in 1767, and so great was the delight he took in this place, that, possessing his faculties to the last, he caused himself to be carried into the gardens a few hours before his death, to take a last look at them.

The following character of him by a contemporary is interesting:—"He was a worthy man, but indulged himself a little too much in a querulous strain when anything went amiss, insomuch that he said if he had been brought up a hatter, he believed people would have been born without heads. A farmer once gave him a humorous reproof for this kind of reproach of heaven; he stepped up to him, very respectfully, and asked him when he meant to open his gardens: Mr. Tyers replied, 'the next Monday fortnight.' The man thanked him repeatedly, and was going away; but Mr. Tyers asked him in return, what made him so anxious to know, 'Why, sir,' said the farmer, 'I think of sowing my turnips on that day, for you know we shall be sure to have rain.'"

He devised this property equally between his two sons and two daughters, Thomas, Jonathan, Margaret, and Elizabeth. The younger son conducted the gardens, and continued it till his death in 1792, when Mr. Bryant Barrett, an eminent wax-chandler, having married his daughter and only child, became part owner, and undertook the management; he soon after bought the other share. He died in 1809, and devised this estate to his two sons, George Rogers Barrett, Esq., and the Rev. Jonathan Tyers Barrett, D.D., by the former of whom the entertainments were carried on for many years.

In 1821, the Messrs. Barretts disposed of the property for upwards of £30,000, to T. Bish, F. Gye, and R. Hughes, Esquires, who carried on the concern with a considerable degree of credit and respectability; no expense having been spared to render the gardens attractive and worthy the attention of the public. Upon the failure of these gentlemen, who had involved themselves in large speculations, the gardens were disposed of by public auction; since which time they have gradually sunk lower and lower in the public estimation, and the period is not far distant when they will be numbered among "the things that were."

The price of admission to these gardens was one shilling up to the summer of 1792, when additional and more expensive decorations having been made, it was raised to two shillings. Subsequently it was raised to three shillings and sixpence, and four shillings.

Originally the walks were open, but some years ago a covering was placed over some of them to guard against damps, or a sudden shower; in 1810 and 1811, this was extended to another walk, and was supported by iron pillars; the pavilion also was considerably enlarged, and in the front was placed a colonnade of the Doric Order. In 1812 the rotunda was thoroughly repaired, and highly decorated; the interior being made to represent an Indian garden room.

The name of Spring Gardens was continued till 1785, when they were termed Vauxhall Gardens.

We have now finished our brief account of this famous place of amusement, which the nobility, and even royalty, once patronised with a degree of fervour, amounting almost to enthusiasm. Even the aristocratic Walpole in one of his letters to his friend Montague, dated June 23rd, 1750, thus describes it:—

"I had a card from Lady Caroline Petersham to go with her to Vauxhall. I went accordingly to her house, and found her and the little Ashe, or the Pollard Ashe as they call her; they had just finished their last layer of red, and looked as handsome as crimson could make them .....We marched to a barge, with a boat of French horus attending, and little Ashe singing. We paraded some time up the river, and at last debarked at Vauxhall .....Here we picked up Lord Granby, arrived very drunk from Jenny Whim's.....At last we assembled in our booth, Lady Caroline in the front, with the vizor of her hat erect, and looking gloriously jolly and handsome. She had fetched my brother Oxford from the next box, where he was enjoying himself with his petite partie, to help us to mince chickens. We minced seven chickens into a china dish, which Lady Caroline stewed over a lamp with three pats of butter and a flagon of water, stirring and rattling and laughing, and we every minute expecting the dish to fly about our ears. She had brought Betty the fruit-girl, with hampers of strawberries and cherries from Rogers's, and made her wait upon us, and then made her sup by us at a little table.....In short, the whole air of our party was sufficient, as you will easily imagine, to take up the whole attention of the Gardens; so much so, that from eleven o'clock till half an hour after one we had the whole concourse round our booth; at last they came into the little gardens of each booth on the sides of ours, till Harry Vane took up a bumper and drank their healths, and was proceeding to treat them with still greater freedoms. It was three o'clock before we got home."

Such were the pleasures of Vauxhall Gardens a century ago.

COCKER'S ARITHMETICK: BEING A PLAIN AND FAMILIAR METHOD, SUITABLE TO THE MEANEST CAPACITY, FOR THE FULL UNDERSTANDING OF THAT INCOMPARABLE ART, AS IT IS NOW TAUGHT BY THE ABLEST SCHOOL-MASTERS IN CITY AND COUNTREY. COMPOSED BY THOMAS COCKER, LATE PRACTITIONER IN THE ARTS OF WRITING, ARITHMETICK, AND ENGRAVING. BEING THAT SO LONG SINCE PROMISED TO THE WORLD. PERUSED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN HAWKINS, WRITING MASTER, NEAR ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH IN SOUTHWARK, BY THE AUTHOR'S CORRECT COPY, AND COMMENDED TO THE WORLD BY MANY EMINENT MATHEMATICIANS AND WRITING-MASTERS IN AND NEAR LONDON. This Impression is corrected and amended with many Additions throughout the whole. Licensed Sep. 3, 1677, Roger L'Estrange. London; Printed by J. R. for T. P. and are to be sold by John Back, at the Black-Boy on London-Bridge, 1694. 12mo.

This curious volume consists of 215 pages, exclusive of Dedication; Address "To the Reader:" "Mr. Edward Cocker's Proeme or Preface;" another Address to the "Courteous Reader" (signed John Collens); list of persons by whom "This Manual of Arithmetick is recommended;" and "A Table of the Contents." Prefixed is a rude portrait of Cocker, with these lines under:—

"Ingenious Cocker! (Now to rest thow'rt gone);
Noe Art can show thee fully but thine own;
Thy rare Arithmetick alone can show,
Th' vast Sums of Thanks wee for thy Labours owe."

The Address "To the Reader," by the Editor, is worth extracting, as it gives us an insight into the history of this popular little manual.

"Courteous Reader,

"I having the Happiness of an intimate Acquaintance with Mr. Cocker in his Life time, often sollicited him to remember his Promise to the World, of Publishing his Arithmetick, but (for Reasons best known to himself) he refused it; and (after his Death) the Copy falling accidentally into my hands, I thought it not convenient to smother a work of so considerable a momeut, not questioning but it might be as kindly accepted, as if it had been presented by his own hand. The method is familiar and easie, discovering as well the Theorick as the Practick of that necessary Art of Vulgar Arithmetick: And in this new Edition there are many remarkable Alterations for the benefit of the Teacher or Learner, which I hope will be very acceptable to the World: I have also performed my promise in Publishing the Decimal Arithmetick, which fiuds encouragement to my Expectation, and the Booksellers too. I am

Thine to serve thee,
JOHN HAWKINS."

The first edition of Cocker's Arithmetick is now a rare bibliographical gem. A copy sold at Puttick aud Simpson's, in March, 1851, for £8 10*s*. Dr. Dibdiu never saw any edition printed in the seventeenth century, and mentions the 32nd edition, as the earliest he had met with.

Specimens of Ancient Poetry.

From a MS. Collection of Old English Poetry, temp. James I.

I.

Wronge not, deare empresse of my heart,
The meritts of trewe pascion,
By thinking that he feeles noe smart,
That sues for noe compation.

For knowing that I sue to serve
A saint of such perfection,
Whoome all desir, though non deserve
A place in your affection;

I rather chuse to want releefe,
Then hesserd the revealing,
Where beauty recommendeth greefe,
Despaire disswades the healing.

Since that my heart cannot approve
The meritts of your beauty,
It comes not from defect of love,
But from excess of dewty.

Silence in love bewraies more woe
Then woordes, though ne'er so witty;
The beggar, that is dumbe, you knowe,
Deserves a dubble pitty.

Sir Walter Raleigh.

II.

Great and proude, if shee deryde me,
Lett her goe; I'll not despaire;
Eare to-morrowe, I'll provide mee
One as great, less proude, more faire;
Those who seek love to constraine,
Have theire labor for theire paine.

Those that strongly can importune,
And will neither faint nor tyer,
Gaine, they saye, in spight of fortune;
But such gaines I'll not desire;
When the prize is shame or sinn,
Winners loose, and loosers winne.

Looke uppon the constant lover:—
Greefe stands painted in his face;
Grones, and sighs, and tears, discover
That they are his only grace;
Thaie will weepe as children doe,
That will in this fation wooe.

I, that hate those idle fancyes,
Which my dearest rest betraye,
Warn'd by others' harmful chances,
Use my freedome as I maye;
When the worlde saith all it can,
'Tis but,—"O, inconstant man!"

Scraps and Sketches.

The Music in Middleton's Tragi-Comedy of the Witch.—Joseph Ritson in a letter addressed to J. C. Walker, (July, 1797) printed in Pickering's edition of Ritson's Letters, (vol. ii., p. 156) has the following passage:—

"It may be to your purpose, at the same time, to know that the songs in Middleton's Witch, which appear also to have been introduced in Macbeth, beginning, 'Hecate, Hecate, come away,' and 'Black spirits and white,' have (as I am informed) been lately discovered MS. with their complete harmony, as performed at the original representation of these plays. You will find the words in a note to the late editions of Shakspeare; and I shall, probably, one of these days, obtain a sight of the musick."

The MS. here mentioned was in the collection of the late Mr. J. Stafford Smith, one of the Organists of the Chapel Royal. At the sale of this gentleman's valuable library, it passed with many other treasures of a similar nature, into the possession of Dr. Rimbault, where it now remains.

"My Eye and Betty Martin."—This popular expression is said to be the commencement of a Popish prayer to St. Martin, running thus, "Oh mihi, beate Martine."

Henry the Eighth's Book against Luther.—In the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, is preserved a copy of Henry the Eighth's book against Luther, said to be the identical one that the author presented to the Pope. It was purchased at Rome by Mr. Woodburn, and by him presented to the University. The Vatican does not possess the volume, which gives some colour to the story. It has the King's autograph, but singularly enough the library of Bologna contains a copy stamped with the royal arms, and also signed with the royal hand. The claim of the Fitzwilliam copy is therefore somewhat doubtful.

Extract from an Old Sermon.—In one of B. Gilpin's Sermons, preached at Greenwich, (1580) is the following curious passage:—"When Christ suffered his passion, there was one Barabbas; St. Matthew calleth him a notable thief; a gentleman thief, such as rob now-a-days in velvet coats; and other two obscure thieves, nothing famous. The rustical thieves were hanged, and Barrabas was delivered: even so now-a-days the little thieves are hanged that steal of necessity, but the great Barrabases have free liberty to rob and spoil, without measure, in the midst of the city."

Sheridan and Gibbon.—The great work of Gibbon was once quoted by Sheridan, in his speech on the trial of Warren Hastings, as "the luminous page of Gibbon." Proud of the compliment, the historian every where repeated it. When this was told to Sheridan, he replied, "I said vo-luminous."

London Churchyards at the Reformation.—In one of Latimer's Sermons, (Third Sunday in Advent) that eloquent man thus addressed his congregation:—

"I do marvel that London, being so rich a city, hath not a burying-place without; for no doubt it is an unwholesome thing to bury within the city, specially at such a time, when there be great sicknesses, and many die together. I think, verily, that many a man taketh his death in Paul's Churchyard, and this I speak from experience; for I myself, when I have been there in some mornings to hear sermons, have felt such an ill-favoured, unwholesome savour, that I was the worse for it a great while after, and I think no less but it is the occasion of much sickness and diseases."
